

Manifest o pravednoj tranziciji

----- UPUTA ZA KORIŠTENJE WEB PORTALA -----

Klimatske promjene sve su očitije, a njihov utjecaj na radnice i radnike jasno je vidljiv. Na primjer, vrućine ljeti su sve češće i češće, a ako pogon nije adekvatno klimatiziran mogu naštetiti zdravlju radnika – smanjena je sposobnost za rad i mogućnost koncentracije, zbog toga je veća mogućnost ozljeđivanja, a u ekstremnim slučajevima dolazi do slučajeva padanja u nesvijest.

Istovremeno, tehnologija napreduje i mogla bi se iskoristiti u korist radnika – za prilagodbu radnog prostora ili za olakšavanje uvjeta rada.

Klimatska kriza i tehnološke promjene zahtijevaju radikalni preokret industrije – želimo industriju koja će staviti radnička prava i planet ispred pohlepe korporacija.

Trebamo tranziciju na industriju koja će poštivati ljude i planet, a ne ih iskorištavati radi profita: pravednu tranziciju.

Clean Clothes kampanja se zalaže za pravednu tranziciju u tekstilnoj industriji. Ako u tom pothvatu uspijemo i poboljšamo uvjete rada u jednoj od najslabije plaćenih industrija, uvjeti rada morat će se poboljšati i u drugim industrijama.

I ti možeš sudjelovati u ovom pokretu. Pridruži se Novom sindikatu i Clean Clothes kampanji, globalnoj mreži koju čini više od 200 organizacija ujedinjenih u borbi za veća prava tekstilnih radnica i radnika.

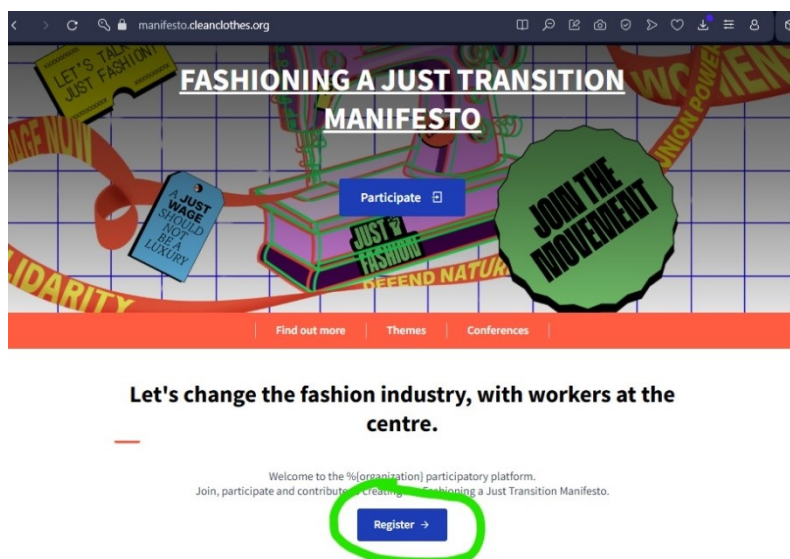

Ulogiraj se na manifesto.cleanclothes.org i sudjeluj u izradi Manifesta o pravednoj tranziciji.

Manifest će postaviti temeljna načela za pravednu tranziciju prema obnovljenoj modnoj i tekstilnoj industriji.

About this process

A worker-powered transition starts with freedom of association and civic space

Without freedom of association and the right to protest and organise, workers will be left on the receiving hand of the transition. This is why freedom of association is one of the solutions to climate change. Labour rights groups and trade unions are engaging directly with workers and taking action for a Just Transition through research, advocacy, workplace awareness raising, supporting workers in the clean up after disasters and engaging with communities on climate. Trade unions are also bargaining with employers on climate issues. Unions' work for a Just Transition is threatened by union busting and the repression of workers' organisations, targeting of worker leaders and by the gap that exists between technocratic decision making, effective policies and practices and workers' direct experiences.

To enable a worker-centred transition, workers must be able to lead in climate planning and to organise and bargain collectively; trade unions must have an inclusive, nondiscriminatory and participatory seat at the table when decisions about climate transition are being made and workers must be equipped with the knowledge, information, skills and access to legal support needed to be a driving force towards new models of production.

Trade unions would benefit from collaboration with organisations and experts engaged in environmental protection issues (research and policy papers) to elevate their argumentation in the processes of the collective bargaining with employers. On the other hand environmental movement can benefit from welcoming workers and worker organisations and including their perspectives in their demands and policies.

I agree that JT should become "a popular movement", and not an elitist movement, where knowledge is accessible only to the experts. Workers should receive info about JT in an accessible format, and environmental movements should also think about enlarging their ranks and adding issues such as labor/work to their causes.
